Corcoran School of Art

Division of Continuing Education / Open Program

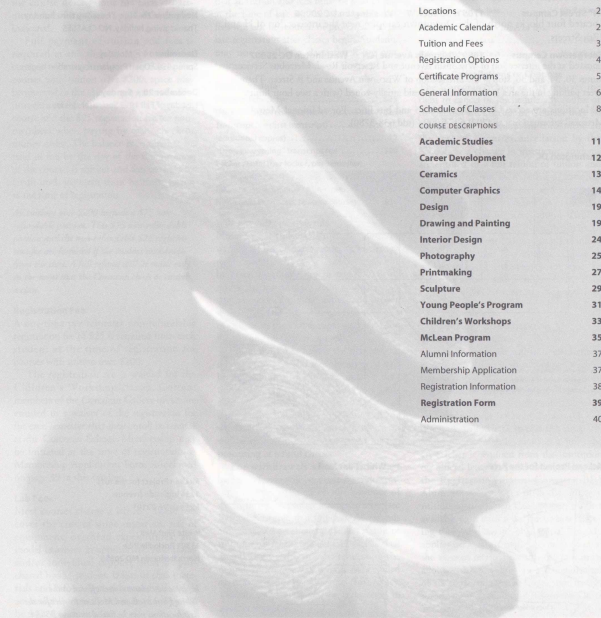

Serving the community for over a century, the Open Program now attracts an annual registration of over 3,000. The students are diverse — young, old, middle-aged, working, retired, professional, homemakers, college students, artistic novices and experienced art students. Their common bond is motivation. Regardless of background or occupation, they have come to the Corcoran to take classes because of their great desire to learn and grow.

Samuel Hoi
Dean Corcoran School of Art

The Open Program is a non-degree program that provides a wide range of art classes for students of all ages and backgrounds. The program is designed to be flexible and accessible, allowing students to take classes at their own pace and on their own schedule. The classes are taught by experienced artists and are designed to provide students with a solid foundation in art and to help them develop their own artistic voice. The program is open to anyone who is interested in art and who is willing to commit to the program. The classes are held at the Corcoran School of Art, which is located in the heart of Washington, D.C. The program is a great way for students to learn about art and to develop their skills in a supportive and challenging environment.
